Denver Jittery
Over Firebug

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 23.—(U.P.)—A mysterious firebug, blamed by police for blazes in three Catholic churches and several downtown office buildings narrowly missed capturing today.

The "torch man" chose the Synes building here for his sixth fire in two days. In a vacant room adjoining a business office, he lit debris piled against a wall. The fire blazed up within a few feet of where a man, Johnson, a newspaperman, was working, but was separated from him by a wall.

Johnson noticed smoke in the hallway and ran into the vacant room. The fire had just left Johnson then unrolled a fire hose and doused the fire thoroughly.

The Produce will probably play either Monday or Tuesday night. If the local boys lose one more game they will be out of the league.

Long, lanky Jiggs Wright was on the mound for the Produce, and he was leaped upon in the first two innings by the Napa team for six runs, three hits and two errors.

FARMERS WILL GET GUARANTEE COTTON PRICE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—UP—Southern senators usually friendly to the administration revolted today against the AAA's new 12 cent a pound guarantee and nine cent loan on the 1935 cotton crop and sought to force a flat 12 cent loan by means of an amendment to the third deficiency bill.

The movement was led by Senator James P. Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, an administration stalwart. He had the support of most cotton state senators.

NEW COTTON BILL
Chester Davis, AAA administrator, met this move with a prediction that the new cotton policy would give farmers a 200% return of $1,000,000,000 on this year's crop, the highest annual total since 1929.

The new policy involves:
1.—A government agreement to lend farmers nine cents a pound on this year's crop to enable them to get cash and delay actual marketing.

2.—A guarantee that when the crop is finally sold the farmer's average return will be 12 cents a pound. A direct subsidy payment will make up the difference between 12 cents and the average price of spot cotton from September 1 to January 1. A new provision in the AAA amendments, providing that one third of United States cotton receipts may be used for subsidizing farmers will furnish the money.

The market reaction to the plan was a drop of about one cent to around 10 1/2 cents.

FEEL IN SEEN
This drop convinced many senators that the new policy would bring ruin and disaster. Davis, however, insisted that the new plan "not only promises the best cotton income the South has enjoyed for years, but it also means enlarged outlets for cotton exports, which are of immense importance to the cotton industry."

"When cotton farmers understand how easily and simply this plan will work, they will be in no hurry whatever to market this year's crop," Davis said. "The assurance of government payments to farmers makes up to them the difference, if any, between 12 cents and the average price of cotton on the 10 spot markets from September 1 to January 1 will enable growers to take ample time to estimate the true market situation and sell their cotton to the greatest advantage to themselves."

FREE MARKET
"Farmers should remember that the present plan restores a free market, so that growers can benefit directly from orderly and intelligent marketing of their crop."

Memphis, Charles Johnston, manager of the cotton pool, announced that sale from the pool had been continued. The pool holds an estimated 200,000 bales on which delivery can be demanded at September 23. If prices fall sharply the pool will take up these options, it was understood.

YOUTH DENIES NATION TO TO OFFICIALS CONTINUE HE KILLED 27 PEACE MOVES

AUBURN, Aug. 23.—UP— Just because he wanted some bananas and cigarettes, Earl Cramer, 21, added 27 members to two already confessed, he glibly told Sheriff Elmer Gunn today.

Cramer, "recluse of Folsom Flats," a mile high mining area in the Sierra Nevada mountains, told deputy sheriffs and newspapermen last night that he had killed 27 persons in the last two years.

PAIR MISSING
At first authorities lent some credence to his mass murder claims. The bodies of James C. Kennett, 65, and John Thomas McLean, 17, had been recovered from a water-filled mine, where Cramer admitted he tossed them.

Cramer, alias Kimball, willingly told of stabbing and shooting the pair to death after brief and apparently petty quarrels.

Feed Reeling, mine caretaker, and John Johnson, prospector, both of whom knew Cramer, had been missing for weeks. Both Sheriff Gunn and District Attorney L. L. Sparks believe Cramer, a strapping, wavy-haired youth, was connected with their mysterious disappearance.

TAKEN FOR RIDE
Last night he told questioners he had killed Reeling and Johnson among his 27 victims. He gave instructions where their bodies would be found.

Today he assured the sheriff that he knew nothing about the fate of Reeling and Johnson.

"I just took those fellows questioning me for a ride. I told them all that stuff out of devilment to get some bananas and cigarettes. It's all a lot of baloney," he said.

SEEK BODIES
Quest for bodies last night had been on with numerous calls for the trait and cigarettes.

Authorities continued to search the Folsom Flats district for Johnson and Reeling, however, believing that Cramer's "confession" might have contained some truth with respect to the missing pair.

Bones found near his cabin were said today by Cramer to have been those of cattle he stole and butchered.

MOTIVES TOLD
Sheriff Gunn challenged Cramer's contention that he killed Kennett in self defense, and McLean after the latter had stolen his rifle and shot several times at him.

"He killed Kennett to get checks coming through the mail to Kennett from Chicago. He called the red-haired boy either because he knew too much or to get the $2 the boy had with him," Sheriff Gunn insisted.

Meanwhile, Sacramento police announced they would question Cramer regarding the slaying of Eden to Yorkshire. They kept in touch with the Federal office by telephone. Ferman attached there meanwhile labored over the outline of diplomatic strategy.

An unconfirmed report that Britain had sent a sharp note of warning to Italy caused intense excitement in Italian circles until it was denied. Eden's departure for the country also caused a false report he had flown to Paris on a special mission. The rapidly with which such rumors spread was indicative of the high state of diplomatic nerves.

LONG STAY AWA
Eight ministers attended the Imperial Defense committee meeting, which spent two hours and 20 minutes discussing military, naval and aerial preparations to safeguard the empire in case the Anglo-Ethiopian crisis should give rise to "certain contingencies" discussed by the cabinet yesterday.

In clearing the decks for military action, the defense committee's action was a natural sequel to the cabinet decision to prepare for future action. Mussolini has left no doubt that he will go on with or without the League or against it, as he made clear in an interview in Rome today with Ed L. Keen, European vice-president of the United Press.

MANY PRESENT
Among those present at the defense session were J. Ramsay MacDonald, Lord President of the Council, Sir Samuel Hoare, Foreign Minister, Sir Basil Liddell Hart, Chief of Staff, Lord of the Colonial Secretary, Neville Chamberlain, Chief of the General Staff, and an important aerial defense official.

The committee approached the problem in the light of the following outline of probable policy laid down by the cabinet:

1. Britain will demand firm League action.

2. In event of war all diplomatic means will be exhausted.

3. Britain will cooperate with other nations in economic sanctions against the aggressor.

REINFORCED GARRISONS
1. Relations with the aggressor nation will be severed.

2. Britain will consult with other powers regarding military sanctions.

It is believed reinforcement of British garrisons in Africa was considered. Orders were sent to 150,000 troops to leave Bombay immediately for Aden, Arabia, and here await further orders to proceed to Addis Ababa.

Dreaded Scurvy Disease Is Due Entirely to a Lack of Vitamin A

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

SOURVY is another one of the conditions due to vitamin deficiency in the diet. It was a very common disease among adults for centuries, particularly among army and navy men. It was a most dreaded and common disease among sailors in the days of sailing ships, when men were sometimes at sea for weeks and months without any fresh fruit or vegetables.

In the late war many died of the disease who were held for long time in besieged cities and could not obtain proper food. In peace time it is uncommon among adults but is still quite common in children under two years of age.

Only the general knowledge of the condition and the method of prevention and cure has kept the mortality down. Some years ago when pasteurization of cow's milk for baby feeding became common, the disease was very prevalent among babies. At that time we did not know that the heating and oxidation of milk destroyed vitamin A, which is the anti-scurvy factor in food.

At first it was supposed to be the heating that caused the trouble, but it was found that condensed and powdered milk still contained the vitamin A. It was further learned that heating the milk did not destroy it, oxidation did not take place.

Skin Color Changes

In an adult the first signs of scurvy is a change in the color of the skin. It becomes sallow or muddy. The patient commences to complain of tingling quickly, suffering from shortness of breath, and is weak. He is annoyed by aching pains in the joints and muscles, particularly of the thighs, arms and legs. These pains are often mistaken for rheumatism.

Very soon the gums become spongy and sore, they swell and bleed readily. Black and blue spots may occur over various parts of the body without apparent cause. Over a period of a few days may develop or bleeding occurs behind the eyeball and causes the ball to bulge out.

Great weakness, shortness of breath and palpitation soon prevail. The teeth get loose and may fall out. The breath is very foul, and hemorrhages appear in the muscles of the legs. If the disease is not stopped, death may occur from general weakness or pneumonia, or some blood poisoning.

Infantile scurvy (Carlow's disease) is much more common. It generally occurs in a poorly nourished pale infant. It is first noticed that the child whimpers and cries out when picked up or even approached. It lies in a doubled up position with one leg drawn up to the abdomen.

The upper leg is swollen and extremely tender, particularly at the lower end at the knee. The pain is in the muscles. In less severe cases the child is peevish and fretful, wants to be left alone. At times he eats ravenously and at other times refuses food. If teeth are present, there is bleeding from the swollen gums and baby shuns food because his mouth is sore. Bleeding of the nose and intestines is common. One of the early signs is bulging of the eyeballs due to hemorrhage behind the orbit, and blue spots appear scattered over the body.

Flesh Becomes Tender
The flesh of the entire body may become very tender. The condition is often mistaken for rheumatism because of the pain around the joints. The bones break easily and do not unite well unless the disease is recognized and cured.

The condition is due to one thing only, and that is lack of vitamin A. This is found only in fresh fruit and vegetables. It is present in mother's milk if she eats these articles. It is also present in cow's milk if she has grass or fresh fodder.

Potatoes contain the vitamin and is about the only vegetable that can be obtained or preserved through the winter, which furnishes a sufficient amount. In Ireland and Norway, when the potato crop is a failure, scurvy prevails.

Orange and lemon juice are the best anti-scurvy fruits. Raw milk is good in sufficient quantity, but the dangers of raw milk are too great for safety. Of the vegetables, cabbage, tomatoes and potatoes are favorites. Recovery from scurvy is magical when proper fruits and vegetables are provided.

Every child should receive one teaspoonful of orange juice a day diluted with water and sweetened, later a tablespoonful. Of tomato juice, twice the quantity. Canned tomato juice is as useful as raw juice. Drugs are of no value, and the child should be kept in bed and handled as little as possible to avoid pain.

Profiles for Today

Miss Curtis Is Financial Genius

By TALBOT LAKE

MISS CATHERINE CURTIS, who went into the stock market when she was eighteen, and has been in and out of it ever since, discovered while she was trying to trade that Wall Street men were somewhat disposed to disfavor women in the market. This made her mad, and since she is the kind of person who always has something doing in her corner, she did some looking up. She found that women own seventy per cent of all the wealth in America, with a goodly portion of this in stocks and bonds.

That was too good to let go by, so after considerable preparation, Miss Curtis last spring launched her Women Investors in America, Inc., which handles women's accounts. So important did her publicity (about the women owning seventy per cent) strike the Administration that she was invited to speak before the Senate Finance Committee in its hearing on new tax measures.

At that, when you consider women hold $210,000,000,000 of the $320,000,000,000 estimated national wealth you can see the idea of a company catering exclusively to women was not bad. Miss Curtis was born in New York and educated in St. Agnes School, Albany. As a health-builder she bought a ranch in Arizona. Harold Bell Wright, who was making a film production of his story, "Shepherd of the Hills," happened to see her one day at Phoenix, and asked her to play a part. She did, and her to play a part. She did, and as a producer rather than an actor. The experience of handling the business end turned her more definitely into finance, and when she had had enough of the movies she chucked it all and went back to New York.

Since then her life has been intricately wound up with the doings of the stock market. She's so good that she's ahead on her transactions despite a pretty good pasting in the November, 1929, debacle.

School Girls Should Work On Skin Now

By JACQUELINE HUNT

YOU cannot do much with an ugly, pimpled complexion in three or four days, but you can often accomplish miracles in three or four weeks. So please, girls, if you feel unhappy about your skin now, do not wait until you have started back to school and then write me sad, urgent letters asking how you can become clear and fair and unblemished for the first big party of the year.

Start this minute and follow a simple, but rigid, program and you can be pretty and self-confident by the time school gets well under way. Be honest with yourself. You will probably confess that your habits of skin care are not everything they should be and that your diet is not carefully regulated. Over-eating and blackheads usually precede the acne condition and the minute you notice them, work like mad to keep them from developing further.

Wash your face, neck and hands thoroughly twice a day with a thick lather of bland soap and tepid water. After the scrubbing use first tepid water and then cold for rinsing. You should also use wetting preparation afterward if your skin feels drawn and irritated. Do not use creams or oils of any kind until your skin is greatly improved.

If the blackheads and oiliness do not react properly to this strict, cleansing measures you will have to use more drastic measures. After your preliminary cleansing, hold a washcloth squeezed out of hot water over your skin until it feels relaxed and flushed. Then cover the tips of your fingers with cotton and press the blackheads gently to remove without bruising the skin.

Pimples should be opened with a sterilized needle when ripe and the contents extracted carefully, then the pimples dried up with alcohol. Do not pick at the pimples as soon as they appear, you may get a seriously infected spot that will leave an ugly scar. You will also spread the infection from one part of the skin to another.

In very serious cases, a physician should be consulted. Usually they will recommend a diet for you and medicated ointments or lotions for clearing up the acne. You can do a great deal yourself, by drinking ten glasses of water daily, and eating fresh vegetables, fruits, milk and good fresh meat at your meal times. Do not eat between meals. Avoid candies, ice cream sodas and such rich foods at all times.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "My skin is oily and slightly darkened from exposure to the sun. Can you give me a good pack that will help correct both of these conditions?"—Mrs. Brown.

Mix together one tablespoon almond meal, one teaspoon peroxide, one teaspoon bay rum and enough witch hazel to make a thin paste. Spread this on your thoroughly cleansed skin and allow to dry. Remove by sponging with tepid water, then rinse with very cold water or pat with a bracing skin tonic.

QUESTION: "I am a natural blonde, but during the last few months my hair has become distinctly darker. Is there any harmless preparation that will keep it light?"—Ruthy.

Anything that will make your hair really light is in the nature of a bleach. Of course, you can bring out the golden lights and keep your hair fluffy and soft with lemon or camomile rinses. You can use peroxide, but this will make your hair coarse, streaked and dry in time and you would be wiser to let your hair darken as it naturally tends to do—keeping it in excellent condition at all times, of course.

QUESTION: "I wonder if I should use lipstick? I have very pretty white teeth, but my lips are thick and protruding and any lipstick that I have tried yet seems to make my mouth too conspicuous."—S. J. S.

If your lips have a good natural color, I would advise you to omit the lipstick. If they are so colorless that they call attention to themselves, then use a small amount of lip color, but use it carefully and be sure to select one of the duller rose or russet shades that are natural looking. Keep the color well inside the natural line of your lips and spread it evenly by biting the lips together.

Oscar Tests Onion Soup

Oscar, famous host of The Waldorf-Astoria for over forty years, has his own recipe for onion soup au gratin. Here it is:
Four large onions (finely sliced), four ounces sweet butter, one tablespoon flour, three points good stock (either beef, chicken or other meat or vegetable stock), three rolls, sliced, dried, one cup grated Parmesan cheese.
Wash butter in a large sautepan; cook onions till brown; add flour, mix and cook for two minutes; then add the stock. Season to taste and let boil ten minutes. In a porcelain dish pour the onion soup, on top arrange the sliced, dried rolls, and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Place under fire, color your soup until gratined. Five minutes of medium fire should be sufficient. Serve promptly.

Angles Seen In Millinery For Autumn

By IRENE VAIL

New York—Angles and more angles, say returning millinery representatives in analyzing their reactions to the French collections. And as the imports arrive, they fully bear out this statement.

As one phase of the autumn mode, both brims and crowns surmount the angular. Squared lines occur again and again, in squared-off brims to the boxlike backs of crowns, to the sharp points which jut out at sides or backs of manipulated silhouettes. Often this is achieved by the handling of the body or fabric of which the hat is made, but the applied trimmings act quite as independently in "cutting a figure."

With a subtlety which is only possible for an accomplished designer, the French milliners have introduced for fall the higher crown. But the high crowns which Reboux customers take to with avidity, season after season, have their ups and downs here.

Fall, 1935, reveals a transition of line which is one of the most vital and striking developments in millinery. Turbans, berets, and brimmed shapes are deftly molded, draped, and manipulated into hats with crowns that have definite height. Front fullness—the big departure in bodices—less and less diaphan control in bodice shaping—bloused from waistline—draped from the shoulders—or draped from the neckline—all the aftermath of the Vionnet drawing neckline of two years ago.

More dresses that answer to "soft" or "formal afternoon"—the use of draped bodices or draped skirts accountable.

Modes and Manners

QUESTION: "Is it customary when someone in one's immediate family becomes very ill and is sent to a hospital, for one's friends to write or call and offer sympathy or to help?"—N. L.

ANSWER: One's close friends will help or companionship, at a time like this. They will show a friendly interest.

QUESTION: "We are a brother and sister traveling together. How should we register at a hotel?"—V. B.

ANSWER: The sister should register directly below the name of her brother. The brother writes, using this form, "Ms. Barbara Black, Galveston, Texas." The sister writes "Miss Barbara Black, Galveston, Texas."

MODERN WOMEN

The Case Where the Girls Have to Invite the Boys, or There'll Be No Boys

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

IF you're complaining letters come to my desk from girls who had themselves forced to invite boys rather than to accept their invitations. Here is a typical excerpt:

"When we want a party we have to invite the boys. They take us home, of course, but they never call for us. They never fail to come and always seem to enjoy our company. But they never take us out. I know that they don't (take other girls out). We decided that it was because we asked them places, so we quit but still they don't come around."

You and Your Child

Saying "Sorry" Encourages Lying

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

YOUVE been in a fight with your child's mother, and she's been in a fight with you. The only way we can get together is by asking the boys. Should we pass up our good times or continue to ask them?"

My first guess about this particular case would be that these boys are not in a position to invite girls out—there is by no means an uncommon lot. It is also possible that they are more attracted by the parties and good times than by the girls. Why not, if you are bent on pleasing hostesses, try your luck with another group of boys?

Men, young and old, take lightly the things given lightly. They still have a marked preference for doing their own pursuing and are not above taking it out on girls who insist on unrequited consideration a masculine privilege.

Don't be too eager. Don't checken yourselves by paying for your own fun and taking. The boys who seem socially desirable now may not seem so once school doors are over and the social horizon broadened. Youth can stand to wait and not be greedy for grown-up pleasures.

Contact with boys at the school-day stage should be free of any great social effort on either part.

Not Much Money

Young people are usually very limited in resources, and have to take what they can get out of the free-air boys of the Dutch Treat, or every man for himself formula, is a comfortable one to employ. There is no reason why girls should pay it all.

The next time you girls feel in a party mood see what luck you have in a co-operative one, for every one is expected to contribute. It's one thing to hold up one's end and another to be a good thing. One is respected and the other laughed at.

Single men, whether sixteen or sixty, are always in demand by hostesses. There's always a warm welcome for an extra man and, goodness knows, they are spoiled soon enough without beginning in the school days to run after them. The right sort of boy considers it a good enough break to have his girl friends willing to co-operate on a 50-50 basis.

Short Cuts

The bride is inclined to buy pots and pans with an eye to beauty of line and color at the expense, sometimes, of more practical values. Take but one, for example. With this in mind, she will see that pots have flat bottoms the diameter of the burners on her range. Also there is a better distribution of heat in pots with straight sides than in pots having rounded sides. Covers and lids should fit down snugly.

A tasty sandwich spread consists of chopped roasted peanuts blended well with salad dressing.

An ice breaker makes the preparation of summer drinks a joy. There is one that looks like a cocktail shaker and works like an egg beater. It is made of glass and will not break in use. It may be used for a measuring glass also.

When pectin is used in making jams and jellies, be sure to keep accurate time of the boiling period. Count it with a timepiece, in fact. Start timing the boil only when a full rolling boil is reached. A "full rolling boil" for the sake of those who are not sure when they have it, is a boil that continues even during the stirring.

A notable summer treat is lemonade served in place of water with the noontime or evening meal.

A plain white sauce is given a cooling and individualistic tang pickles or pickle relish.

You can clean plaster of Paris articles by covering them with wet starch. When dry, brush off.

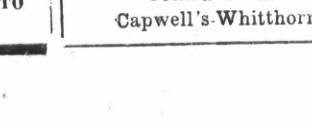

ALYCE NOW A MODEL

Alyce Jane McHenry, who smiled her way through successful operations for her "apple-down" stomach, has taken up modeling. She is shown here wearing a pin-checked belted material and the collar carries a new cape style. The hat is included in the ensemble, and is of the same material.
